BARK BEETLES KILLING TIMBER

South Georgia Pines Being Ravished By Pine Bark Beetles

Insects known as pine engraver, or pine bark beetles have increased to epidemic proportions in southern Georgia since mid-summer and are now ravaging many longleaf and slash pine forests in this area and in Florida.

Forest entomologists of the Southeastern Forest Experiment Station at Asheville, N. C., in cooperation with the Georgia State Forestry Commission found higher losses to be concentrated in the vicinity of Tifton, Ga., following a preliminary aerial detection survey on November 3. Tift, Turner and Worth counties have suffered the heaviest timber losses to date.

Federal entomologists estimate that losses are estimated to reach 50,000 cords or 25,000,000 board feet of timber on approximately 50,000 acres in these three counties since the beginning of 1954.

IMPORTANCE OF CONSERVATION

Cecil W. Chapman, SCS, Stresses Essentials and Cites Recent Developments

Farmers, bankers, civic and community leaders through out the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District met at the community house in Milledgeville last Thursday evening to honor the six men from each of the counties in the district, who had been chosen as the "Men of the Year in Soil Conservation" from his county.

Following a delicious barbecue served by the ladies of the community, the meeting was called to order by A. D. Clifton, chairman, the district supervisor. Congressman Prince H. Preston, who was the scheduled speaker of the evening was unable to attend.

Cecil W. Chapman, of Athens, state soil conservation director at Georgia, brought a very enlightening and challenging message on our county state and national program of soil and water conservation.

Mr. Chapman paid tribute to the efforts of the district supervisors, A. D. Clifton, Henry Bligh, Leggett and L. A. Mendenhall, John M. Lester, Morgan, Dewey Adams and W. D. Sands, who have given so generously of their time, with no thought of remuneration, to help the land more productive and conserve and develop our natural resources, thereby leaving for our children a legacy of a better place in which to live.

Continuing Mr. Chapman said, in speaking of all those engaged in the task of soil and water conservation:

"They are men of foresight and wisdom, who recognize full well the implications of a rapidly increasing population, periodic periods of water scarcity, periodic periods of water surplus, and the salvation lies in use and management of agricultural land."

Philosophy of Self-Government

"These men believe in the concepts and principles of self-government and a way of life that fosters and encourages individualism such as exemplified by your soil conservation districts. They are men like them in the other 25 Soil Conservation Districts of Georgia, are serving you without pay or hope of reward except that which comes from satisfactory service. This and the future generations owe them a debt of gratitude."

Speaking of the progress and trends in recent years of soil and water conservation Mr. Chapman pointed out that working together this team of research, education, financial and technical assistance has brought about some rather positive such as exemplified by your soil conservation districts. They are men like them in the other 25 Soil Conservation Districts of Georgia, are serving you without pay or hope of reward except that which comes from satisfactory service. This and the future generations owe them a debt of gratitude."

During the last 15 years, we have constructed approximately 14,000 farm ponds as a source of livestock water supply and supplemental irrigation. We are now planning annually in Georgia some 100,000,000, 60,000,000, and 20,000,000 in the seedlings each year. This compares with less than 100,000 in the early '30's," said Mr. Chapman.

Cooperation Essential

"Working together these organizations serving farmers with help of knowledge from research, help from educational groups, Agricultural Extension, V-A-G, and schools, technical assistance from SCS, financial help from FFA, the annual meetings.

Thanksgiving Day

Since President Lincoln's proclamation in 1863, Thanksgiving has been a favorite American holiday. And, for 355 years, the day has grown from a small community celebration to a national holiday.

This year the people of our great nation anticipate with even more pleasure the day of Thanksgiving... because it is surrounded by all the warm and happy customs we love... because we are grateful that our lives are filled with those countless little things which make for happiness.

The anticipation of pleasure is also a measure of gratitude. It is shown in ways as sincere as a visible expression of appreciation, whether it be to a friend, to the giver of all good and perfect gifts.

Though employment throughout the nation has been fluctuating somewhat during the past year, we in Georgia are particularly thankful that we have over 900,000 wage earners. In 1949 there were 838,000 wage earners in our state, drawing approximately $4,644,000,000 annually. We are particularly grateful for the labor force is composed largely of veterans who have returned from foreign battlefields and have successfully defended our American way of life. It is gratifying to know that hundreds of new industrial plants are moving into our state each year... that many of our plants are being expanded and that our economic conditions are sound.

Truly, Thanksgiving Day receives the customs and traditions which we anticipate with utmost pleasure. It aims to give us a day to give and to receive with the gratitude inspired by the realization of our blessings. Thanksgiving Day is to restore our confidence and make us realize more and more that we as Americans would not trade places with anyone.

In concluding these remarks, Commissioner of Labor Ben T. Huet said: "Mindful of all the blessings that have come our way, the old family Thanksgiving service at the church should make a perfect day."

New Protection For Farmers
(From the Cobb County Times)

The amendments to the Social Security Act which President Eisenhower signed into law on September 1 are of importance to both farm operators and farm workers.

The new law extends social security protection to almost all farm families after this year. Nation-wide, about 3,600,000 self-employed farm operators will be covered for the first time in much the same way as other self-employed persons already under the program. Approximately 2,100,000 more hired farm workers will have insurance protection for themselves and their families on January 1, 1955.

This means that by the time they have worked through two more crop years, elderly farm people may be insured, so that they can receive monthly social security checks after age 65. A farmer's family will be protected, too, so that if he should die, at any age, the widow and young children would receive monthly payments. For a retired farmer and his wife, the payments will be from $45 to almost $163 a month, depending upon his earnings, while the family of an insured worker who dies will receive from $45 to $300 a month.

The address of the Social Security office in Atlanta is Room 446, 50 Seventh St. Bldg. If it is not convenient for a farmer or farm worker to visit that office, he can get an application blank at the post office and mail it to the above address.

RAILROAD RATES ARE REDUCED

Aid For Cattle Raisers In Drought Areas To Obtain Essential Feed

(By W. Tap Bennett, Agricultural Development Dept., Central of Georgia Railway)

At the request of President Eisenhower, the Central of Georgia Railway has reduced its freight rates on feedstuffs for cattle raisers in drought areas to obtain essential feed.

Every year in the U.S. about three billion tons of soil are washed or blown away from farm lands.

patrons who are in distress. An impression seems to exist, however, that the federal government will reimburse the railroad for the reductions made in the freight charges. This impression is entirely erroneous as the entire loss is borne by the railroad.

These reduced rates were granted by the railroad to aid cattle raisers in the areas where feedstuffs are in short supply.

Each of these practices is dependent on the other. Using each acre of land for what it is best suited to do is the key to the success of the program.

Certain grasses are better adapted to moist land, other grasses to uplands and others to droughty sandy lands.

The Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District stands second to none in the soil work that they have accomplished.
